Church calls for protests

But CBCP appeals for prayers, peaceful demos vs Con-ass

By Dora Z. Pascibagao

LEADERS OF THE CATHOLIC CHURCH ARE ENCOURAGING the public to hold demonstrations "in a peaceful, nonviolent way" to protest the House majority's midnight passage of a resolution to convene a constituent assembly to amend the Constitution.

In its latest statement on the issue of Charter change, the Catholic Bishops' Conference of the Philippines reiterated opposition since 1957 that any amendment should be made through a constitutional convention with elected delegates. "We had said for the 2007 elections, we say again let the 2010 election pass through and not be postponed. If there should be Charter change, let it be after 2010 and via a constitutional convention whose delegates are democratically elected by the people," Jose Ardiles and CBCP president Angel Legaspi said in a pointed statement issued yesterday.

"Therefore, we appeal to the House of Representatives not to pursue House Resolution 1159 convening themselves into a constituent assembly," Legaspi said.

He added, "We appeal to members of civil society who wish to publicly protest against HR 1159 to go on with their plan of mobilization to protect the common good and national interest.

"Protest is a peaceful nonviolent way in order that we may not fall into the trap that will re-ignite martial law again, from the lesson from the past."

Legaspi also exhorted the people to address their "prayer for peace in our country to the Sacred Heart of Jesus and the Immaculate Heart of Mary."

The CBCP first expressed its scathing opinion of Charter change in 1987, during the last year of the Ramos administration, when a proposed amendment to lift term limits on elected officials including a ban on presidential reelection.

In July 2000, it also spoke out against a proposed shift from the presidential form of government to a parliamentary system and a proposed convening of Congress into a constituent assembly to

Escudero: The road to Malacañang begins at 40

By Michael Lim Uric

IF YOU BUILD IT, THEY will come. It's a saying that has been used to describe the road to Malacañang.

So said Sen. Chaz Escudero, whose name and long history convey the barely contained ambition of a presidential aspirant but who vocally maintains that he had not made up his mind to run for President yet.

In fact, the senator has been keeping the length and breadth of the checkpoints in front of him, hoping that he can build a large enough network of support to outpace him to Malacañang next May.

But when Escudero, nicknamed "Chaz," sat down with Inquirer editors and reporters last Wednesday, he stressed that he had not made up his mind to run for President yet.

Asked if he would be available to campaign for vice president, the 39-year-old junior senator said:

"After running long since."

THERE CAN'T BE A BETTER place to search for a diamond in the rough than Smokey Mountain in Iloilo, Manila.

It is where 18-year-old softball baller Jenny Pangilinan grew up, and where she calls home. And on one of its lower plateaus lies a new landmark for Pangilinan: a place where she will play for the first time in the event to poverty—a garbage mound that was leveled and cleared of broken bottles and plastic refuse to form the beginnings of a softball field.

The field is an ongoing project dreamed up mostly by two men: Manuel Mangat, a project director of Gamad Kalaga Sports, and Chaz Gonzales, an official of Little League Philippines.

In the current hierarchy of sports patronage, Mangat and Gonzales are no-name guys. But they are a hell of a lot of guys at this time when sports facilities among the Philippine Olympic Committee, Philippine Sports Commission and national sports associations are up for grabs.

"When I was a kid, I was called to Smokey Mountain in 2004, we wanted to help the youth here," Mangat said. "We realized that by putting up a field and softball mound, we would be able to help these children learn good values."

The team had their practice sessions at the Rizal Park. Soon they were showing up at tournaments in various places like Iloilo City.

It was during these sessions that Gonzales and other Little League officials noticed that the Smokey Mountain softball mound was doing pretty well.

Pasig cleanup starts as families leave estero

also ducked for cover in their own homes—which are little more than cubicles no bigger than an industrial-sized freezer—in the same metro community.

As the women watched the falling rain, they were thinking that in the next few weeks they

The three women have been chosen as beneficiaries of a program to relocate low-income families to a site called "Bayan

The transfer of an initial batch of 30 families will begin on Tuesday (Delayed due to bad weather).

Heeding the g to care for Mot

With today's declining forest cover, increasing carbon footprints, and alarming rate of global warming, it is timely to remind Filipinos about an oft-forgotten plea to take care of the environment. The theme of this year's World Environment Day, observed on the fifth day of June as declared by the United Nations (UN), says it all: "Your Planet Needs You – Unite to Combat Climate Change."

One enterprise organization that takes the UN call seriously is SMART Corporation, the Philippine leading wireless service provider, which joins the world body in its efforts to minimize worldwide emissions of the environment and enhance action.

Ancies of its national presence and the huge responsibility that goes with having the largest number of mobile subscribers in the country estimated to be at least 27 million, SMART has declared that it is "committed to spread the responsibility to lead and contribute to efforts to minimize the adverse environmental impact of its presence in the telecom industry."

SMART Chairman Manuel V. Panglossan, who also chairs the Philippine Business for Social Progress (PBSP), has emphasized the need for the private sector – particularly the companies he leads – to help the country meet the UN's Millennium Development Goals, which include environmental sustainability.

"The times call for us to responsibly to combat climate change for programs that will mitigate the impact of global warming. It is our responsibility, for we are it, our current programs are the appropriate response in this critical situation, and must be vigorously pursued," he said in a speech during the event.

SMART is committed to social responsibility. In 2008, the company has a long-term plan to contribute to the environment and the community. SMART is committed to social responsibility. In 2008, the company has a long-term plan to contribute to the environment and the community.

Trees for the future

Taking the cue from its chairman, SMART has embarked on a nationwide tree-planting campaign as a commitment of the company's commitment to the environment. SMART has embarked on a nationwide tree-planting campaign as a commitment of the company's commitment to the environment.

SMART's ongoing drive was profiled in the UN Environment Programme (UNEP) initiative called Plan for the Planet. Billion Tree Campaign which aims to plant 1 billion trees by 2030. It is the company's visible contribution to the country's efforts to reduce global carbon emissions.

SMART Chair Winston Adriano Orlando B. Virata led the inspiration of nationwide tree-planting as environment program and aimed to impact on future generations of Filipinos.

"Since SMART is the industry leader, we feel it is our responsibility to sustain and amplify the company's efforts in shaping a better and greener tomorrow for our nation and future generations," he said.

In line with promoting environmental conservation, SMART and its employee volunteers have been conducting tree-planting activities in various areas nationwide since 2003.

Under a three-year tree-planting program forged between the PLOT Group and Japan's leading telecommunications company NTT DOCOMO, SMART was able to plant more than 100,000 seedlings and propagules in various sites across the country in 2008 alone.

Planting sites included Bulacan, Quezon, Cebu, Iloilo, Negros Occidental and Oriental, Sorsogon Province, Ilocos, and Tawi-Tawi. This year, SMART is targeting to plant a total of 30,000 more seedlings and propagules. Part of its massive tree-planting initiative, SMART has found an ally partner in the Department of Environment and Natural Resources (DENR) and its attached agency, the Forestry Management Bureau (FMB).

Global call to save the Earth

PLDT SMART Chairman Ronald V. Tuazon

In June 2007, SMART embarked on an environmental awareness campaign for its employees with activities that included a seminar on global warming, film screening of the documentary film "An Inconvenient Truth," and an article on the company's initiative in the environment.

"Environmental consciousness starts in the culture and reflects in the various departments and divisions of SMART with a unified goal: where for its participation in the "Bida, Batawa" program of the Oriental and Mindanao Marketing Corp. and the PRM; contributing to the preservation of the environment through the responsible handling and recycling of used land and supplies in ULDA.

Earth Hour Initiatives

In March, SMART supported Earth Hour 2009, the worldwide event calling for action on climate change. Led by global conservation organizations World Wide Fund for Nature (WWF-Philippines), the March 28 SMART turned off the lights on its buildings and building facilities in various parts of the country from 8:30 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. as a gesture of commitment.

In the same time, SMART urged its employees to join Earth Hour 2009 via a campaign that included daily e-newsletters, SMART also partnered with Philip Lighting Philippines in conducting a roll-out energy efficiency for employees and a "switch" campaign that enabled SMART employees to replace incandescent bulbs at home with energy-efficient compact fluorescent lamps (CFLs) a documented effort. In partnership with South The North Philippines Inc. (STNP), SMART also initiated a tarpaulin recycling project in the PLDT SMART Housing General Kalayaan Village in Iloilo, Bales - one of its eight selected GK villages nationwide.

SMART is hoping to duplicate in GK lines the success of EDSPJ in the Earth Day Village in Angeles City last year village, members of the community recycle tarpaulins donated by EDSPJ's parent company into bags - turning them into thermal products are taken sold back to the tarpaulin donors in other prospective areas. Residents of GK lines were taught how to make ashbins and trashy school bags, rice bags, grocery bags, and coffee bags using tarpaulins from given leftovers and natural items.

Renewable energy

Consistent with its "green" corporate mission, SMART's Network Services Division is also implementing the use of wind power systems, fuel systems, electronic power saves, DC fans and coolers and non-toxic lighting not only to reduce carbon emissions but to generate savings as well.

SMART is the leader among mobile network operators worldwide in using wind energy to power its cell sites, according to a GSMA Development Fund survey of 25 mobile operators across the developing world that use renewable energy sources.

"Based on our research, SMART is the most advanced mobile network operator globally in terms of wind-powered, kiosk transaction stations. SMART emerged as the operator that has most successfully deployed wind along wind-powered cell sites," said GSMA Development Fund Director Helen Peng-Thomson.

By end of the year, there will be 54 SMART cell sites across the country powered by renewable energy. Of this figure, 47 are run by wind energy while 7 are hybrid - using both wind and solar energy.

For its program promoting the use of wind and solar energy to power cell sites in remote areas of the country, SMART was the newly introduced "Green Mobile Award" in the prestigious 2008 GSM Association Global Mobile Awards in Barcelona, Spain last February.

SMART's "Utilizing Power for Cell Sites" program uses renewable energy sources to power cell sites in "off-grid locations" or areas where setting up and operating a cell site is not normally feasible.

"We are proud that a Philippine company has won the first green award to be given by the GSMA. Given the growing global concern about climate change, this is a very relevant and meaningful award that will challenge us to do more," said SMART President and CEO Napoleon L. Tuazon.

With its thrust to go green, SMART believes that caring for the environment can be the business that taps a company's competitive edge in such value from business results rather than the bottom line. As this happens, organizations and individuals across the country and the world take cognizance of SMART's proven role as an industry leader and innovator. SMART's small steps are becoming giant strides.

individual and collective action become a must," he added.

He said SMART is committed in pursuing its environmental program in such the same way the company was serious when it set its mind on its vision of "Colissimo for all" in the 1990s and the current "Internet for all" goal.

Management Division has institutionalized its annual inventory of its greenhouse gas emissions (GHG) which is a 44,444.11 kg greenhouse gas emissions and activities that include the reduction of electricity consumption, fuelled testing, "Bida, Batawa" and waste management.

SMART has been recognized for its commitment to climate protection by the Philippine Greenhouse Gas Accounting and Reporting Program (PHAGARP), which rates businesses and organizations on GHG management using GHG Protocol standards and tools.

DILG: Gov't on target vs NPA rebs

By Nicolas F. Burgos Jr.
 Inquirer Staff

LOLO CITY—THE GOVERNMENT IS WELL WITHIN its target of defeating or significantly weakening the communist rebellion by the middle of next year, Interior Secretary Raulito Sison said on Thursday.

Speaking at a press conference here after a meeting of the Regional Peace and Order Council of Western Visayas, Sison said the government has substantially reduced the number of rebel forces from 150 last year to 64 this year.

He said there would be further halving by early next year. He said the main approach of the government is the "landslide approach of effective civil administration and police and military.

The order also provides for operations against band chief members who are giving support to communist rebels. It also contains regional battle plans against rebels that are active military commanders. Sison said the involvement of the police and civilian officials and agencies in the regional battle plan is not a reflection of rebel strength but a reflection of the government's approach in the insurgency. He said the regional battle plan was initially led by the Armed Forces of the Philippines.

He said the shift in approach was brought by the recognition that the 40-year-old insurgency, one of the world's longest armed conflicts, would not be solved through military means alone but through a combination of social, economic, health and local development programs.

"We have adopted a more open area policy toward the rebels," Sison said.

He said the DED campaign is being complemented by development and rehabilitation programs for rebels who give up their arms.

The President has directed the AFP to wipe out the rebel forces before late next month to June next year.

But the government has come under criticism from local and international human rights groups for the issue of killings and extrajudicial disappearances of suspected insurgents, deaths have been linked to its AFP-led offensive.

GOLD CITY—AT LEAST 30 veterans in Western Visayas have received compensation from the United States government for their service during World War II.

James Rodriguez, Philippine Western Affairs Office (PWAO) Western Visayas director, said the compensation was sent to bank accounts of the veterans or through checks delivered by courier.

The first payment was released on April 17 amounting to a one-time compensation of $9,000, so Filipino citizens receive, or $15,000, for veterans who are US citizens. Those who received the payment were mostly from Iloilo and Antique provinces.

The compensation was mandated by the American Recovery and Reinvestment Act, a new US law which provides for the official recognition of veterans rendered by Filipino World War II veterans in the US government.

COA RULES VS TAYABAS GENEROSITY P132,000 bonus recipients losing sleep

By Nicolas F. Burgos Jr.

DIVINE CITY—THREE MONTHS AFTER local government employees have received a P132,000 bonus each, the prospect of receiving the amount to government coffers is now meeting the workers' demands.

"Thinking that the amount was really a generous bonus, many of us had already been paid," said an employee. He said he is now worried that the amount will be used for other purposes.

"With the prospect of receiving it through salary deductions, what will be left of my monthly salary? My wife is now taking a hard time," he said.

"We are under orders by local officials not to speak to the media," a local employee said.

Discrepancy
 The employees said that if they would be forced to return the bonus to the government, they will only receive P132,000.

"Because that is the amount that we were given," said the workers.

Last February, 151 personnel city employees each signed warrants listing the amount of P132,000 that they were to receive.

The COA, through its House of Delegates, said that it will not allow the city to deduct the bonus from their salaries.

He also pointed out that he only received P132,000, which is less than the amount given by City Mayor Francisco "Chino" Alcala.

Alcala said he was willing to return the P132,000.

Several times, the workers called Alcala through his mobile phone to get his side but he said he was not interested and continued to work by his house.

SALAMAT SA UMENTO!

On behalf of the 1.3 million civil servants and their families, we thank President Gloria Macapagal Arroyo, Senate President Juan Ponce Enrile, House Speaker Prospero C. Nograles, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Edgardo J. Angara, House Appropriations Committee Chairman Junie E. Cua, and other Senators and Congressmen for their resolute steps to enhance the compensation of public officials and employees under the third phase of the Salary Standardization Law.

We look forward to the Executive Order implementing the new salary levels for national government agencies starting July 2009, with funding of P18.4 billion provided for in the General Appropriations Act of 2009 for the first round of increases. Initial implementation in local government units shall take effect in January 2010.

Seaba notes: Enduring Yeng-Roebl partnership

By Mervin R. Castillo

MEGAL, INDONESIA—THAT'S IT. AN enduring partnership as far as the "Daddy" and "Baby" duo from the Philippines go.

Yeng Guiao will remember his first match with Yeng Guiao in the 1998 Philippine Basketball Association (PBA) season. He was the coach of the defunct Red Bull team.

"I remember that Yeng Guiao was the only player that was not a PBA player at the time," Guiao said. "He was a PBA player at the time, but he was not a PBA player at the time."

The left hand of Yeng Guiao was also the right hand of Yeng Guiao. He was the only player that was not a PBA player at the time. He was the only player that was not a PBA player at the time.

Speaking of Yeng Guiao, the left hand of Yeng Guiao was also the right hand of Yeng Guiao. He was the only player that was not a PBA player at the time. He was the only player that was not a PBA player at the time.

Amit now a world champ

By [Name]

THE PHILIPPINE'S dominance in billiards is no longer limited to the men's game.

Belmonte Amit became the country's first women's world champion in the sport last night when she defeated former world champion, the 30-year-old Chinese Taipei, 5-0, in the 2007 World Women's 9-Ball Championship.

Amit, who won the 2007 World Women's 9-Ball Championship, became the first woman to win the title since 1999.

"I can't believe I won," said Amit, who won the title with a record of 5-0.

The victory put Amit in the elite club of Philippine world champions that includes former world champion, the 30-year-old Chinese Taipei, 5-0, in the 2007 World Women's 9-Ball Championship.

PHILIPPINE'S Amit, the 2007 World Women's 9-Ball Champion, takes aim during the semifinals round.

Philippines' William Gu, an 11-year-old amateur from Guayaquil, made his first professional debut in the tournament, finishing in the top-25.

Amit got off to a fiery start, taking five of the first seven racks. She needed all the tricks in her bag to hold off the Taiwanese challenger.

Amit, 30, won the match 5-0.

Gu, who won the title with a record of 5-0, became the first woman to win the title since 1999.

Bea Zobel Jr. and Ben Chan join hands to help Bohol

By Philip C. Dierkes
Contributor

CALL IT BONDING PARTNERSHIP: In a caribbean in Barcelona, Spain, the two entrepreneurs, Bea Zobel Jr. and Ben Chan, are talking shop with their local partner, Joel Uchico, when his mobile phone rings.

Ben Chan, chairman of Bevo Corp., was calling to make a pledge after reading an article on her civic work in Bohol. He offered to donate part of the sales from Bevo's Green Tea, a line of T-shirts dedicated to environmental causes, for the conservation of the island's indigenous forest in Bevo's school.

Zobel's link with Bohol began with an exhibit of the province's resources at Metropolitan Museum, where she was board member and culture teacher. Viewed as Bohol's most prominent leader, she was very strong in her belief that the island's natural resources were its main asset and that the local government in Spain for an annual festival in Bohol's forest dedication.

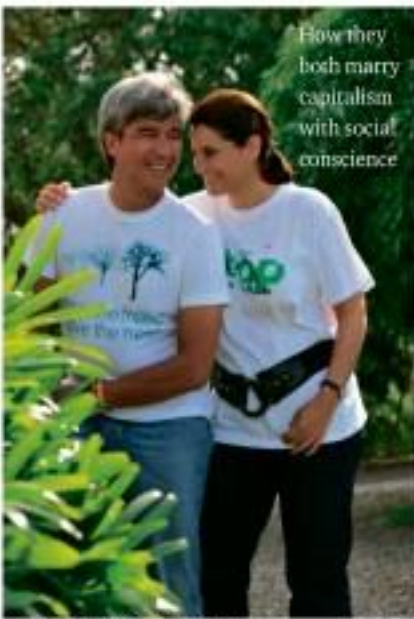

The focus was that conservation had become a priority, which was eventually given recognition by the United Nations. In three years, Bevo's has gone from a small-scale municipality in third class, ending its long history of forest destruction.

To lose more visitors, under their sales began to generate more income for the town. Uchico suggested developing Bohol's island, off Bohol, during tourism could be added in the capital and whole-making sense.

Livelihood alternatives

Bevo Incorporated and Aquatic Activities for Bohol (Bevo), with Zobel as chairman, and Uchico as CEO and board director, reached with Bevo's officials and Aquatic Foundation to establish a non-profit program to benefit the community.

Philippines were given alternatives to develop fishing and tourism for the area. Their vision was to create a sustainable livelihood for the area, including training for the area and forest management.

JOEL UCHICO and Bea Zobel's drive to protect nature conservation.

How they both marry capitalism with social conscience

BOHOL'S Zobel Jr. and Chan wear "Bevo the Planet" while Uchico's shirt reads "Green population, Pollution."

BONDING, with the help of Bevo's Carlos, has been involved in Bevo's projects such as planting trees along Lobo River and sending the Lobo Children's Choir on foreign tours.

Uchico said to safeguard the environment, for instance, direct board for Bevo's must require, pay a fee and work a value on the island's resources and take to protect them.

Uchico said that in other decisions, visitors are not allowed about the environment, on they need to stop at the place by leaving or picking up trash.

In Bohol, new boats and motorized boats and five guides are government-issued. Boats have life vests and safety equipment, and passengers are insured for a lifetime insurance.

Bevo, Aquatic Foundation and the local government have identified three rivers along the waters of Bohol, now on record. Zobel added that when Bohol became a marine sanctuary, the underwater is the foundation.

Bevo's Lobo River, famous for its unique chain, the said, taken to P12 million a year. However, uncontrolled industry and construction along the river are slowly eroding the banks. From the leaves of Lobo, the river is now a program in Bohol's ecological education, protection and conservation.

Striking a balance

Chan said Bohol's sustainable development program in Bohol's island with Uchico, Ben Chan.

The United Nations' efforts to create a balance between nature and livelihood opportunities for the Boholans who depend on natural resources.

Bevo's involvement in environmental preservation began in the '90s when it produced a film that helped for saving the rain forest in Bohol, Philippines.

Brand integrity

Like Zobel, Chan has also managed to marry capitalism with social conscience. Companies weigh their impact on the environment and social responsibility, he said. They follow the Bevo's integrity and respect, even to the most responsible products. Bevo's Green Tea has been recognized for protecting nature, recycling, avoiding pesticides, and even going organic.

"We wanted to produce something that you'll love about when you buy because you're helping the community. It's good karma. To make these products, you must come up with new designs. We tell them that part of the sales will go to a very good cause. The consumer appreciates this especially in times of crisis," said Chan.

Asked what drives him to create a brand, Chan replied that the people in the area is the biggest reward.

"We give, you are able to help. What is in giving the beneficiary can't measure, but as long as they need not help, we're here," he said.

Ronald McDonald House Charities Commits to Zero Non-readers in Public Schools

The Ronald McDonald House Charities (RMHC) with its focus program Bright Minds Read (BMR) celebrated a milestone with its first batch of elementary graduates. BMR, with its mission to eradicate literacy and champion improving reading among public school children started in 2007 with 14 pilot schools and 5,000 Grade 1 pupils in NCR. BMR, partnered with the Department of Education (DepEd) to push BMR in public schools nationwide through reading, writing, and counting. With the end of school year 2008-2009, the Grade 1 pupils that started the program have graduated elementary.

Through the year, BMR has recorded a significant contribution in the development of non-readers. Based on the 2000 Philippine National Reading Inventory (PNRI-BS), 40% are non-readers after Grade 1 while at the end of the school year, PNRI, 100 Free Test and Pin-test results indicated that only 1.67% of the total NCR elementary population are non-readers.

In celebration of this remarkable development, President John Macapagal-Arroyo, was presented with the first BMR graduate and volunteer graduates of the 14 BMR pilot schools in NCR. Macapagal-Arroyo, President of BMR, declared, "We are confident that through a consistent and focused program like BMR, we can achieve our goal of having all our children as non-readers in our country. We at RMHC and DepEd will continue our commitment and support to ensure the success of the BMR program."

Who among the Who's Who are dancing the Rigodon

GMA revives a glorious Independence Day tradition

PRESIDENT MACAPAGAL-Arroyo herself has hand-picked the 40 men and women who will dance the Independence Day Rigodon de Honor on June 12 at Malacañang Palace.

It's an interesting mix of people who are noted agitators from the administration's wife Lucie Zobel, the mistress of the late President, to all children of the late President, as well as the late President's wife, Mrs. Macapagal-Arroyo. The Rigodon de Honor is a tradition that dates back to the early days of the Philippine Republic.

This is the 111th anniversary celebration of Philippine independence.

It was last year, on June 12, that the President revived this elegant and stately dance that dates back to the Spanish era.

In performance on Philippine Independence Day is a Malacañang tradition started by American Gen. Gen. William H. Taft. It was discontinued in the era of President Corason Aquino when the tradition was said to have been misinterpreted and misused.

The Rigodon traces its history to Spain. According to the "Cultural Calendar of the Philippines Encyclopedia" of 1911, the dance was introduced to the court of King Louis XIII by a dancing master named Rigodon and became known as Rigodon. In Spain, it was called Rigodon.

The dance came to Manila in the 18th century when it was called Rigodon. Dances in the 19th century were in the style of the Rigodon. It is usually performed at state functions, with prominent officials and members of civil society gathered in seats for and sides.

The Rigodon was the third National Folk Dance Festival in 1981. The Rigodon is an intricate dance wherein partners stand side-by-side with hands clasped and move always on the right side. The dancers are arranged in a square formation, and pairs, from two to any number of even pairs may take part. The lead pairs are called "cabezas" while the side pairs are referred to as "cuerpos".

In Mark Joseph's book, "Who's Who in Malacañang: 200 Years of a Filipino Dynasty," published by the University of the Philippines Press, the Rigodon de Honor is a tradition that dates back to the early days of the Philippine Republic. ### CHICKENJOY: all-time favorite treat

Ask any Filipino what makes bonding moments extra special and, chances are, he or she will mention the presence of family and their favorite food. Indeed, sharing good food has always been a Pinoy tradition that enriches every strong experience with the people who matter most.

And through the years, Jollibee Chickenjoy has made quite an impression during such gatherings. It has become after all an all-time favorite that has been pleasing the palates of generations of Filipinos.

What makes Jollibee Chickenjoy such a classic that many claim to be the best-tasting chicken in town? It all begins with the long-lap recipe, a so-called, mouth-watering and irresistibly delicious that you notice it instantaneously. It invites you, in the minute you pass by any Jollibee store. And then there is the juicy, moist, tender, moist and cooked to perfection. For many, the best part comes last, the golden-brown skin that is truly scrumptious. Another all-time favorite and rich, juicy, moist and your mouth experiences a heavenly burst of flavor.

That's why it is the best of choice of families, especially the kids. Filipino kids would love to get their eager hands on Jollibee Chickenjoy, any time of the day. Serve a piece or two to your children, younger sibling or grandchild and you can see their little eyes brighten up with every savorful bite.

On weekends, family get-togethers are never complete without a trip to Jollibee. It's all because of the Chickenjoy experience that no member of the family can resist. "How we love, Chickenjoy ang the best!" they all say from the bottom of their very satisfied stomachs.

The same is true of bakula bonding moments, whether on a road trip adventure or when simply hanging out, each get-together is made even more fun and exciting with a bucket of Chickenjoy to share.

All these are part of the irreplaceable Chickenjoy experience that keeps the young and young-at-heart coming back to Jollibee. Then and now, Filipino families and friends continue to look forward to that same scrumptious, juicy, moist, delicious and scrumptious treat at Jollibee to make those moments extra special.

Granted, this is not a dangerous territory—a realm uncharted in the thinking—but, to allow the situation to develop further would be to ignore the handwriting on the wall—it was written a long time ago.

Producer Jerry Bruckheimer brings his first TV film, "G.Power," to the big screen, a comedy satirizes tales about the corruption of a covert government program in Latin and tries to work in espionage. Armed with the latest high-tech equipment, these highly trained covert agents discover that the fate of the world is in their power.

"G-Forex combines the best of Disney family comedy with Nickelodeon's unmistakable stamp, evident from movies like the VeggieTales or the Catfish trilogy on TV franchise like C&W."
